Fund Manager Commentary

European markets lagged their international counterparts this month, both on the equity and on the fixed income side. The Stoxx Europe 50 fell by -3% with health care and consumer stocks being the biggest detractors while Financials were the only positive sector this month. The S&P500 increased by +0.5% as financials and health care performed well, while energy stocks were the biggest detractors from performance. Emerging Markets continued their winning streak with the MSCI EM Index increasing by +0.5%. Developed government bonds retreated in June, while riskier bonds performed generally better. The German Bund 10 Years fell strongly by -1.5% over the month and finished with a yield of 0.5%. Euro Corporate Bonds were down by -0.6% whereas European High Yield increased slightly by +0.2%. Subordinated Financials were negative with -0.7% and Corporate Hybrids increased by +0.6%. In the US, 10 Year Treasury Bonds decreased by -0.8% and yielded 2.3% end of the month. US Corporate Bonds and US High Yield Bonds increased each by +0.3% and +0.1%. The USD fell against the EUR the fourth month in a row and lost -1.7%, ending at 1.143.

Additional information on possible risks in case of unusual market conditions

Counterparty risk : The Sub-Fund could lose money if an entity with which it does business becomes unwilling or unable to honour its commitments to the Sub-Fund.

Default risk : A bond may lose part or its entire value if the issuer is unable to pay interest or repay principal on schedule.

Derivatives risk : Certain derivatives could increase Sub-Fund volatility or expose the Sub-Fund to losses greater than the cost of the derivative.

Liquidity risk : Certain securities could become hard to sell at a desired time and price.

Management risk : Portfolio management techniques that have worked well in normal market conditions could prove ineffective or detrimental during unusual conditions.

Operational risk : In any market, but especially in emerging markets, the fund could lose some or all of its money through a failure in asset safekeeping or through fraud, corruption, political actions or any other unexpected events.
